METHODOLOGY

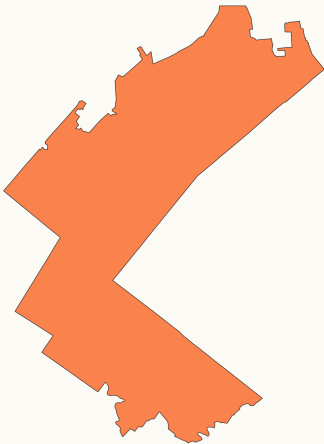

State Navigate surveyed 389 likely voters in Pennsylvania's 131st State House District from September 18-20, 2026. Text messages were sent to voters by AllianceForge, which directed them to an online survey hosted on the SurveyMonkey platform. The sample was drawn from a voter file provided by L2 and results were weighted by gender, race, age, education, party registration, and township to reflect the likely November 2026 general electorate. The margin of error is 5.0% at a 95% confidence level. This survey was designed and conducted by the State Navigate Polling Team, and was not sponsored by any candidate or candidate's committee.

TEAM NOTES & ANALYSIS

The following analysis from the State Navigate polling team examines the forces shaping this race.

MARY RADCLIFFE ON UNDECIDED VOTERS

The few undecideds may lean Sabih's way.

Only 6% of voters in our survey say they are undecided on the HD-131 race, a relatively small sample size. But there may be some good news for Sabih in this group: 64% say they disapprove of Trump, and they break for Shapiro in the gubernatorial race by 38 points (though almost half are undecided in that race as well). Given the small sample size, though, these numbers should be taken with a grain of salt, but there's other indications that undecideds might ultimately lean a bit more Democratic. For example, 5% of Shapiro voters are undecided in the House race, compared with just 1% of Garrity voters.

MARY RADCLIFFE ON VOTER PROPENSITY

The most frequent voters are keeping this race close.

The most frequent voters are helping Sabih keep this race close. Among voters who have participated in 4 out of the last 4 general elections, the race is a 49-49 tie. Among all other voters, Mackenzie has a 3-point lead, 45-42. However, 4-out-of-4 voters are much more likely to have their minds made up, with just 2% undecided compared to 13% among the rest of the electorate, and as mentioned above, that group may hold the key for Sabih in November.
